

Cancer Survivors' Unmet Needs (CaSUN).

Cancer Survivors' Unmet Needs (CaSUN). This self-report measure evaluates supportive care services with 35 items of unmet needs, six positive change items and an open-ended question in five sections: information needs and medical care issues; quality of life; emotional and relationship issues; life perspective; and positive changes. Items are scored according to whether a need is met or unmet and the strength of need (weak/moderate/strong) resulting in a total score. Positive change and the open-end items are considered separately. It has demonstrated good validity and reliability in disease-free survivors 1-15 years after a cancer diagnosis.

Cancer Survivors' Unmet Needs (CaSUN)

Survivors of cancer sometimes report ongoing issues and the need for various services many years after the completion of treatment. The following statements cover a range of different issues which survivors of cancer may face. The issues include:

- information and medical care issues
- quality of life
- emotional and relationship issues
- and the impact of cancer on your life perspective.

We want to learn about your need for services RIGHT NOW. While we know that people may have had many needs at diagnosis and during treatment, this study is focusing on your needs AFTER your primary treatment finished.

Your responses will help us think about the sort of supports and services should be available to survivors of cancer and their families in the future. We also want to know about any positive changes to your life that you may have experienced as a result of your cancer. Please tick the answer that best describes your experience. There are no right or wrong answers.
